Word of Advice...

- Contact French Embassy in your respective country to get direct verification from them regarding EGS' legal status and its recognition by the French Ministry of Education, and the authority vested upon it to grant Bachelor, Master and Doctorate Degrees

CHECK FOR YOURSELF...BY visiting FRENCH Government Official Website

http://www.education.gouv.fr/acce_public/index.php

Step 1

The screenshot shows a web browser window with the URL www.education.gouv.fr/acce_public/index.php. The browser's address bar shows the page is in French and offers translation options. The website header features the French Ministry of National Education logo and the text: "MINISTÈRE DE L'ÉDUCATION NATIONALE, DE L'ENSEIGNEMENT SUPÉRIEUR ET DE LA RECHERCHE". The main heading reads "APPLICATION DE CONSULTATION ET CARTOGRAPHIE DES ÉTABLISSEMENTS DU SYSTÈME ÉDUCATIF FRANÇAIS". Below this, there is a breadcrumb trail "Accueil > Recherche" and a font size selector "A- A+". Two search buttons are visible: "RECHERCHE SIMPLE" (highlighted in orange) and "RECHERCHE AVANCÉE" (in a dark grey box). The search area contains two input fields: "Quoi ?" with the placeholder "Nom de l'établissement, numéro de l'établissement, nature, tutelle..." and "Où ?" with the placeholder "Adresse, commune, département, académie, région, pays". At the bottom of the search area are two buttons: "RECHERCHER" and "NOUVELLE RECHERCHE". The footer includes links for "Contact", "Mentions légales", and "Aide".

Recognition vs. Accreditation

- French Government uses CENTRALIZED Higher Education system – whereby the Ministry of Education itself regulates, approves, and monitors all the approved and recognized higher education institutions. Hence in France, just like in many European countries including the U.K., RECOGNITION is what establishes the legitimacy and credibility of an institution of higher education.
- In France and many other centralized-higher-education-system countries, ACCREDITATION NOT Compulsory or Required. Accreditation is mainly applicable in the USA – because the country runs DE-CENTRALIZED higher education system, and hence to regulate quality of higher education institutions, the government appoints accreditation bodies to handle the monitoring and supervision of academic standards and quality of such higher education institutions.

Recognition vs. Accreditation

<https://www.therighttu.com/guide/accreditations-and-rankings-what-is-the-difference-between-accredited-and-recognized-degrees>

- Accredited degrees and courses are recognized by the professional bodies of the respective professions, often required before one can work and practice in a specific professional field, such as: Architecture, Dentistry, Dietetics, Occupational Therapy, Optometry, Pharmacy, Counseling, Physiotherapy, and Speech Therapy

Vs.

- Recognized degrees, on the other hand, are for the vast majority of careers that do not require accreditation. Undergraduates (or graduates) planning to become journalists, full-stack web developers, or enter human resources or sales & marketing do not need an accredited degree to be guaranteed employment. However, gaining a recognized degree from a bonafide educational establishment can potentially increase your chances of employment.

List of universities and colleges in France

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

This List of universities and colleges in France includes universities and other higher education institutes that provide both education curricula and related degrees up to doctoral degree and also contribute to research activities. They are the backbone of the tertiary education institutions in France. They are listed as different categories, depending on their administrative status, size and extents of research activity compared to educational activities.

Aside from the nationally funded public education system that provides recognised degrees to the vast majority of students in France and that keeps tuition fees low, there exist private institutes.

Public universities in France [edit]

Main articles: List of public universities in France and Pôle de recherche et d'enseignement supérieur

French public universities (see List of public universities in France for a detailed list) are as of 2015 in the process of reorganization according to the Law on Higher Education and Research passed in July 2013. This includes some merging of institutions, and the previous high-level organization under Pôle de recherche et d'enseignement supérieur (PRES) has been dissolved.

EGS - Paris

Why “School” not “University”

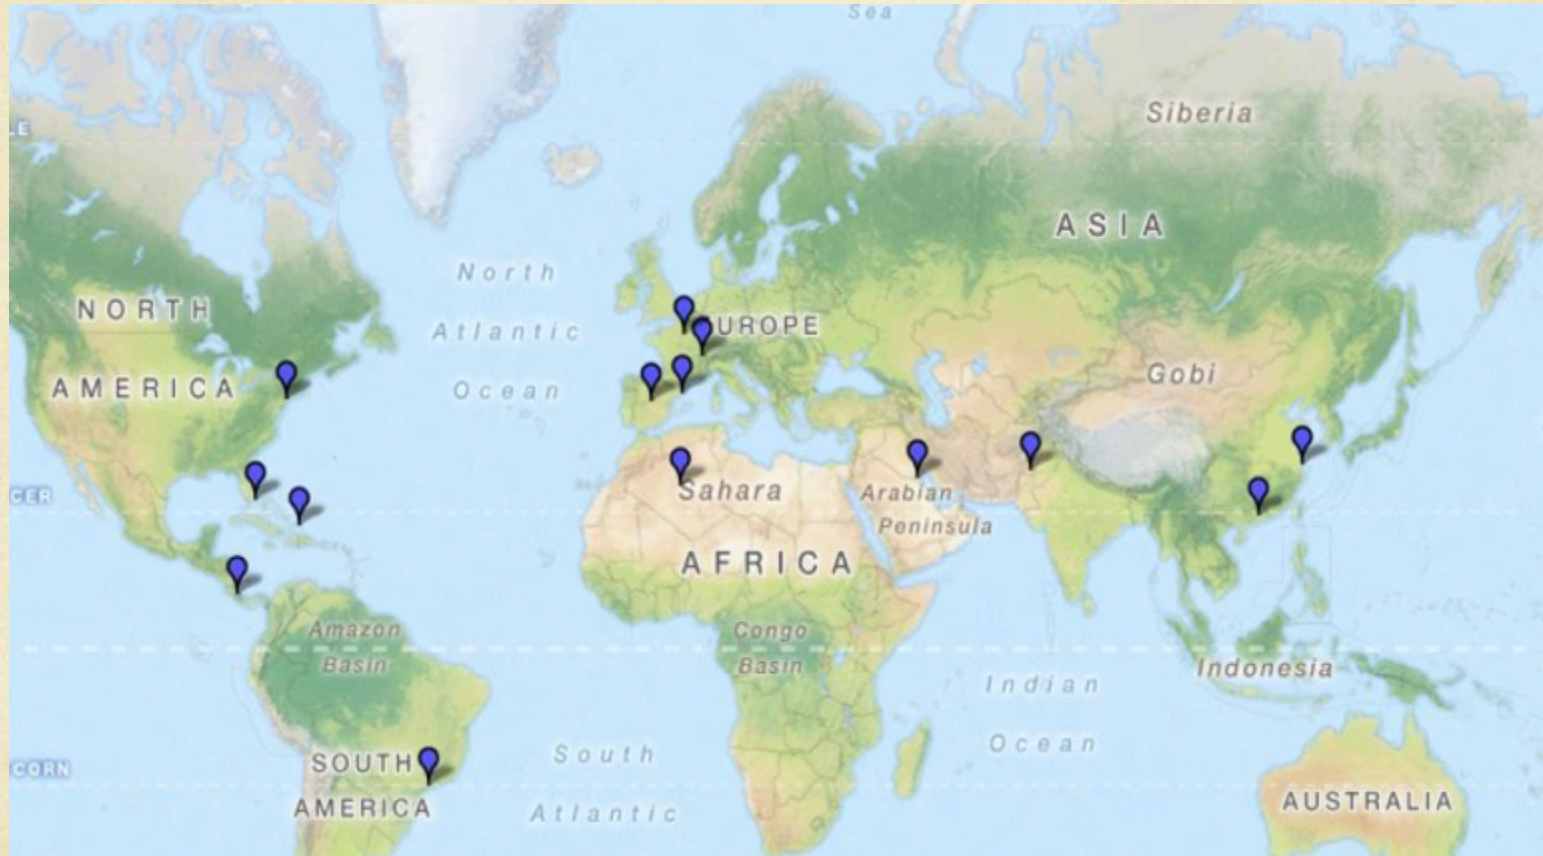

- Most private universities in France are SPECIALIST in nature, hence the government call them “School” - EGS-Paris, similarly specializes in a few professional fields, hence, falls under this Specialist University Category - hence the use of the word “School”, not “University” in its name - but EGS-Paris is a full-fledged UNIVERSITY, as ONLY UNIVERSITIES ARE AUTHORIZED TO GRANT DEGREES.
